Imagine the world as you know it turned upside-down. Your country, state, town, and even your home have split into two. During the Civil War, the nation split as the northern and southern states fought against each other in the bloodiest war America had ever seen.

In the years leading up to the war, Boston fortified its harbor to protect its crucial trade routes and port. When it became clear that battle would never reach as far north as Boston, Fort Warren was given a new purpose: a Confederate prison. The fort’s great cannons were taken from the ramparts and sent overseas, and over 2,000 soldiers and prisoners from the south and west were locked up in the makeshift prison cells of Fort Warren.

Fort Warren continued to defend Boston Harbor throughout The First World War, the Second World War, and the Spanish American War. The island was used as a training facility well into the 20th century until its designation as a National Historic Landmark in 1970.
Life at the Fort
Many soldiers played games and sang songs to pass the long, tiring days at Fort Warren. During World War II, Bastion A – also known as the “Dark Arch” – was turned into a recreation hall to entertain soldiers, and included a movie screen and even a bowling alley.

Visit Bastion A and imagine what it looked like in the early 1940s. Are there a lot of soldiers there? What are they doing? Draw a cartoon below of what you think you might have seen!

Conduct a Ranger Interview

As you prepare for an exciting day in Boston Harbor, stop by the Visitor Center and talk to a ranger, participate in a program, or just find out what you can do during your visit!

- What is your name?

- What does a Park Ranger do?

- Ask a question you have about Park Rangers!

If you can, find an activity to attend on the island. What program was it? What did you do?
Mealtime

Take a peek inside the Visitor Center to see what people ate while living at Fort Warren.

Who had the biggest meal?
Who had the smallest meal?
Why didn’t each person get the same meal?

What's That Sound?

If you were standing on this island 150 years ago, what do you think you might have heard? What can you hear as you explore the island today? Use words or pictures to describe two sounds from the island's past, and two sounds from the present day!

1860 vs. Today

Below are two images of the fort during the Civil War. Find these two locations on the island and see if you can tell how they have changed!

Morse (De)Code

Before there were phones, computers or electricity, messages still needed to be sent quickly. In the early 1800s, Morse Code was developed in order to send messages over telegraph wires.

What was the name of the popular Civil War song that began on Georges Island? Use the key below to crack the code!
